«At the hairdresser»

Mary Brown is a pretty young woman. She takes pains to look beautiful. Two weeks have passed since Mary went to the hairdresser's. Now she decided to change her style altogether. She made an appointment with her hairdresser, but she is a bit late.

Mary: Good morning! I am afraid, I am a bit late.

Hairdresser: Good morning. Don't worry, I have a vacancy now. Is it a long time since you had your hair died? Do you want it died black?

M: I'd like a haircut first. Please, cut my hair short.

H: Are you sure? Your hair is beautiful. Let's have it trimmed.

M: Oh, no. I am sick and tired of long hair. Cut it short, please and then die it blond.

H: Shall I give you a shampoo?

M: Yes, please. I like herbal shampoo.

H: Your hair is dry. Honey shampoo would be better.

M: Fine. Let it be honey. What type of dye do you have?

H: I've got a very good French dye. It has only been on sale for a month.

M: It won't take long, will it?

H: It will take about an hour. Are you in a great hurry?

M: Unfortunately I am. My husband will be waiting for me near our favorite restaurant in an hour and a half. Today is our wedding anniversary.

M: All right. You may set it as well... Is there anybody in the beauty parlor now?

H: Congratulations! Then you'd better have your hair dried with a fan.

M: I'm lucky. I am sure I'll be in time.

H: Just a moment... They can take care of you in fifteen minutes.
